The history of Comunn Féis Mhàbu precedes Celtic Colours by several years. Founded and guided by Maureen MacKenzie, it set out to preserve the Gaelic language and music and dance traditions that were once predominant in the Mabou area. They have continued to provide youth programs every year during the festival and in the summer, and to host Celtic Colours concerts. Today Maureen's legacy lives on, as you will see the youth of Mabou sharing Gaelic songs and welcoming two groups of students who have travelled all the way from Scotland to participate in Celtic Colours. From the University of the Highlands and Islands on the Isle of Benbecula in the Outer Hebrides we have Anna-Wendy Stevenson and her students. And from the heart of Glasgow, a group of students from the Royal Conservatoire of Scotland, taught by Phil Cunningham. Celtic Colours is truly blessed to be able to see the future through the music of these young Gaels as they continue the link with our ancestors in Scotland and show us that our culture is alive and well. Show begins at 2 PM.
